The main feature of a pyramid scheme is that participants only earn money by recruiting more members. There are many different types of pyramid schemes, but the two more basic are bare pyramid and so-called products. In a naked pyramid regime, no product is sold. Here's how it works: a person recruits 10 other people to participate in a "investment opportunities No-Fail investments". The 10 recruits each pay the $ 100 recruiter. The recruiter now tells them to go out and recruit 10 people to do the same. If every recruit is successful, all end with $ 900 in profit from a $ 100 investment. Simple enough, but here is the problem: let's say the 10 initial recruits find 10 more people. Those 100 new recruits will have to find 10 recruits each to make $ 900. This means that they must find 1,000 people willing to enroll in the program. And if somehow find 1,000 people, that the next level of the pyramid will have to recruit 10,000 to make a profit. In the end, there will be not enough recruits at the bottom of the pyramid to support the level above it. Here is when pyramid thumbs and all after all lose their investment. A pyramid scheme based on products is the same concept masked by a legitimate direct sales opportunity. Here's how it works: a recruited distributor 10 sellers paying $ 500 for a product starter kit for sale. The distributor gets 10 percent of each starter kit that is sold. The distributor also obtains 10% of each product that one of its recruits sells, including more start-up kits. Recruits are told that the fastest way to make money is not selling products, but recruiting more people to buy start kit. People on top of the pyramid receive commissions from all in their downline, the numerous levels of recruits under them on the pyramid. The problem with most of the product-based pyramid schemes is that the products themselves do not sell very well, or they have very thin profit margins. So the only way to make money is finding more recruits. In the end (and surprisingly quickly), the market becomes saturated. There are too many people trying to sell the same product unattractive and no one to be recruited. It is mathematically impossible for everyone to make money in a pyramid scheme. For example, if any recruit needs to find 10 people to recover the cost of its initial investment, the eighth level of the pyramid should recruit a billion people to recover their money. And the next level would need 10 billion, almost double the land population. In reality, pyramid schemes do not work unless someone doesn't lose. Those at the end of the pyramid are essentially defrauded by those on top. It is a mathematical fact that no matter how many people join a pyramid regime, 88% of members will be on the lower level and will lose their money [Source: Pyramid Scheme Alert]. The pyramid schemes are illegal because people do not lose their money due to normal market forces, but since the system requires them to lose so that some at the top they win. The spheres show that in a naked pyramid regime, 90.4 percent of the people lose their money, while in product-based pyramid schemes, that number jumps to a shocking 99.88 percent [source: Taylor]. So what is the difference between pyramidal schemes based on products and legitimate multilevel marketing company (MLM)? Or is there such a thing like a legitimate MLM? Read on for more information.
