In some cases, password protection simply blocks access to data. In other cases, sophisticated data encryption is used to encrypt the data. Encryption provides a much higher level of security, and the level of security provided by encryption depends on the encryption algorithm used and how the application applies your password in the encryption process (key management). Password protection, and in particular file encryption, can cause the following problems for law enforcement, military agencies, Fortune 1000 companies, and government agencies: Forensic text search utilities cannot identify text strings in encrypted files. Critical business data can be held "hostage" by using file encryption. Evidence in criminal cases can be protected from "criminals" through file encryption. Passwords used to protect data in files can be forgotten or lost when an employee becomes unavailable. NTI makes available a complete suite of Password Recovery Software Tools for its corporate and government clients. The password recovery software was created to address protected files through the use of popular computer applications. It is not NTI's objective to help hackers or criminals access sensitive data. Furthermore, the guaranteed decryption is available (usually, by time) of WinZip archives with 5+ encrypted files); It works regardless of the complexity and password length. The program also has a text attack known for the ZIP and ARJ archives, which allow you to decipher the zip or arj archive in a few minutes if at least one file from the archive is available.
