Only 13 percent of PS3 owners have seen a movie on their game console if you believe the Blu-ray Disc Association (BDA), millions of PlayStation 3 gamers around the world are watching movies on their game console. That's not true, says HD DVD Man Olivier Van Wynendaele, and it doesn't even work for HD DVD movies on the Xbox 360. Van Wynendaele is the spokesperson for HD DVD Promotion Group - he made the assertions during an exclusive interview with Tech.co.uk conducted yesterday. He also said that most PS3 owners didn't know that their consoles could play movies. Period: "According to independent figures we have from independent research companies and so on, it seems that console owners 60 percent of games don't know they can play movies - or DVD or Blu-ray - on PS3. That means at least 60 percent are not active." Even with the 40% left... 13 percent are actually using their game console as a player, and the rest aren't. People buy their consoles to play, not watch movies. "The HD DVD Experience For further testing, Van Wynendaele turned to Microsoft's record with the addition of HD DVD to Xbox 360." The fixing speed is less than two digits. So [Microsoft has] sold a lot, but it's an expensive accessory for a game console. It was the cheapest HD DVD player on the market, but still less than 10 percent of [Xbox 360] game console owners bought. "He also said Microsoft's research had concluded that console owners play a game for an average of 400 hours, but only spend three hours a month watching movies." That's why we don't see on the PlayStation 3 side why players would behave differently than Microsoft. "Maybe someone from the Blu-ray field would like to explain? Who says you have to go to the theater to enjoy that big screen movie experience? Now you can get the same di sensazione dal comfort di casa con questo" 160; Ultra HD 1080p Intelligent Home Projector, Projector, 59% for a limited time. Advanced Micro Devices CEO Dirk Meyer on Thursday said the company will provide on-demand games and movies for devices such as smartphones, in an effort to bring more usability and interactivity to its devices. To download a game or movie, a user could click on a link on a mobile device. A video experience could add more usability to devices, Meyer said. People will need a web browser and an application to download broadband connection to cross the experience over to instantly play or watch Blu-ray movies, Meyer said. The supercomputer, which will be called Fusion Render Node, will change the way games and movies are delivered to mobile devices, Meyer said. It will provide a petaflop of performance. Other supercomputers and making it the world's first "Fusion Graphics" in the world, said Meyer. The Fusion Render Node also has many intrinsic benefits for a supercomputer, Meyer said. It will consume a tenth of the power of a supercomputer while it fits into a room, rather than corridors like other supercomputers. Supercomputer graphics - is essentially a high-performance desktop rack with ATI 4800 series graphics cards and Phenom II processors connected to each other and squeezing at the same time. The GPUs and CPUs will work consistently, but the performance of the petaflop relies primarily on the 128 GPUs; the capabilities of the floating points, said John Taylor, a spokesperson for AMD. The system can be expanded by adding more gaming platforms to the rack. In an on-stage presentation, Jules Urbach, founder and CEO of Otoy, showed off multiple ATI graphics cards from multiple PCs working together to deliver a first person shooter game to over a wired connection to a client device. Otoy is a software company that helps deliver graphics content from a server farm to client devices, and is working with AMD on creating HD graphics delivery technology. Suddenly we're taking one of the most complicated games in the world and we're putting it on a Web page. It's huge, Urbach said. The server will be ready by the second half of the year. All you need is an iPhone, [or] a laptop to use it, AMD said. Mobile computing will never be the same, and cloud computing really has the opportunity to open up new horizons for both the film and gaming industries, Meyer said. Now we're ready for a big leap forward in visual computing and mobile computing, he said. Known for the innovations of its Meyer did not talk about CPU, instead trying to focus on AMD226; 128; s attempts to add realism to the game and entertainment on PCs. The promise is I would have en226; He reads during the presentation, and I didn't 226; N. 226;
