You can always refer to the information below to see how the hiring process looks before getting a cabin crew role at Aer Lingus. Step 1: The Online Application Note that all applications for applying for a cabin crew role at Aer Lingus are made online. Simply visit the airline's official career website by clicking this link. www.aerlingus.com/career/page. After clicking the link, it will lead you to cabin crew role hiring dates and other important information. All you need to do is read the job details carefully and then fill out the Cabin Crew application form. You must fill out your personal details and answer some basic questions. This is for the recruiting team to assess that you understand and meet the basic requirement for the cabin crew position. You also need to upload your CV and application letter together with the application form. That said, make sure to create your CV and application form first before visiting the page and filling out the Cabin Crew application form. We also highly suggest making sure you write an impressive CV and application letter as this will be the basis of the recruiting team's first impression of you. Once you're done filling out the application, click the submit button. Expect to receive an email confirming that the airline has received your application. The next thing you need to do is wait for any response or feedback if you pass the initial assessment and are invited for the next round of the hiring process. Step 2: The Online Assessment On the off chance that you have passed the initial assessment, the recruiting team will send an email inviting you to take some online ability assessments. This online assessment usually consists of questions measuring your verbal reasoning skills, personality or behavior tests, and numerical questions. Do not worry, as the complete instructions are also attached and indicated within the email sent by the airline's recruiting team. Plus, there will be some practice questions to guide you before answering the actual online assessment. You must be well-prepared before answering the online assessment. That said, make sure to spare enough time and look for a place where you can answer all the questions without anyone disturbing or distracting you. Image: Aer Lingus Step 3: The Video Interview If you are one of the applicants who pass the online assessment successfully, the recruiting team will send an email once again inviting you to participate in a short video interview. Since it is quite a common process this time, we know for sure you already have an idea of how it works. But if you don't, worry less. The recruiting team will also send the full instructions on their email for the further steps you need to accomplish. This short interview is done pre-recorded, so you will have enough time to prepare before the deadline of submission. Typically, the questions assess your skills and knowledge regarding the role as a cabin crew and a few other questions. So, make sure to do your best to secure a spot for the next steps of your application. Step 4: The Face to Face Interview If you're one of the few short-listed applicants to proceed to the next round, the recruiting team will once again send you an email with an invitation to participate in the face-to-face interview. Note that the face-to-face interview will take place at Aer Lingus Headquarters in Dublin, Ireland. So, expect an invitation to travel to the airline's headquarter for your final face-to-face interview. Since it's the most crucial part of your application, make sure to equip yourself with the necessary knowledge and information about the company and your role as a future cabin crew in the airlines. Usually, the final interview takes around 30-40 minutes as the recruiting team will be assessing you more thoroughly if you are really fitted for the cabin crew position at Aer Lingus. We don't have any other recommendations but to prepare well. The final interview is also a chance given to you to demonstrate that you are capable of taking the role and are very fit to be part of the Aer Lingus cabin crew team. Step 5: Final Checks Congratulations on making it this far! You're now one step closer to your dream of becoming a cabin crew at Aer Lingus. Once you have passed the final interview and are offered a cabin crew role at Aer Lingus, the airline will do a few checks before inviting you to pre-employment training. Typically, the airline will check if you have any criminal records in the last five years and contact your three references. In addition, the airline will be asking you to fill out medical information and to attend a medical assessment. Once all the checks are completed, the airline will now invite you to start your pre-employment training. Step 6: Pre-employment Training As mentioned, once all the background checks are done, the airline will now have you start pre-employment training. It usually takes up to five weeks and is held at Aer Lingus' in-house Training Academy in the airline's headquarters at Dublin Airport, Ireland. The training consists of theoretical and practical training. It ensures that all cabin crews will be equipped with the necessary skills and knowledge before taking you on board.
